

1. We are ALL vessels capable of compassion.

2. We are all equal. We share our humanity.

- Maren Hassinger

Susan Inglett Gallery is pleased to present We Are All Vessels, MAREN HASSINGER's second solo exhibition with the Gallery, from 29 April through 12 June 2021. The Gallery will host a limited-capacity reception with the artist on Saturday, 1 May from 1-5 PM that adheres to COVID-19 safety guidelines.

Three large vessels framed in wire and clad in sheer fabric sway ethereally from the ceiling of the Gallery, two woven wire rope equivalents rest below feet firmly planted on the ground. Hassinger looks to the vessel for its rich history and symbolism, for its resonance with the human body. Scale brings these objects in direct communication with the viewer, while their anthropomorphic design sparks a sense of recognition.

Hassinger observes that "vessel" is a term often ascribed to women. She asks that we free ourselves from the traditional limitations of that label, using her work to expand its meaning: "I believe that the word 'people' does not make the distinction of race, or gender, or class, or origin of any sort." Hassinger shares the space with young artists, former students. By creating a platform where young and old, established and emerging, work together side by side equally, the project itself reinforces these signals of humanity. In the qualities shared by these vessels, and between us, we see our commonality writ large. We are indeed all Vessels.

MAREN HASSINGER (b. 1947, Los Angeles, CA) lives and works in New York. She received her BA from Bennington College and her MFA in Fiber Structure from the University of California, Los Angeles. She has exhibited widely in both the United States and abroad with recent public installations, Monument, in Washington, D.C. through the Smithsonian's American Women's History Initiative and Nature, Sweet Nature, at the Aspen Art Museum, slated to travel to the Oklahoma Contemporary, Oklahoma City.
