Hope Gangloff at Susan Inglett, through June 6.

In the midst of the overwhelming preponderance these days of photo-based paintings, New York artist Hope Gangloff has the audacity to paint from life. Through her colorful, highly stylized brand of image-making, with influences ranging from Egon Schiele to Alice Neel and Sylvia Sleigh, the large-scale portraitist manages to capture some convincing and lively personalities.

Among the highlights of this show of recent works is Yelena, featuring a standing figure in a colorful dress and boots, set against a searing background of interlocking Matissean patterns. And Dark Horse (Tim Traynor)(2015), a similarly compelling image, shows the bearded drummer for the Brooklyn-based band Workout as he pounds away at his kit.

Cildo Meireles at Galerie Lelong, through June 27.

Mary Corse at Lehmann Maupin, through June 13.

Lisa Yuskavage at David Zwirner, through June 13.

Torbjørn Rødland at Albus Greenspon, through June 20.

Michael Heizer at Gagosian Gallery, through July 2.

Al Held at Van Doren Waxter, through July 2.

Jessica Jackson Hutchins, at Marianne Boesky Gallery, through June 6.

Tiffany Chung at Tyler Rollins Fine Art, through June 26.

Simon Hantaï at Mnuchin Gallery, through June 26.
