

Butler, Sharon. "Gallery crawl: Miller, Grabner, Pincus-Whitney, Boyle, Otero, Pope.L., Nelson, Arcangel," Two Coats of Paint, 18 March 2021.

TWO COATS OF PAINT

Allison Miller at Susan Inglett Gallery.

Allison Miller's solo show, "Upside Down Pyramid," is on view through April 25 at Susan Inglett. Miller has moved away from the idiosyncratic compositions of previous abstractions and embraced loose still life and landscape imagery precipitated by collages and photographs made with letters from the alphabet. According to the press release, she drew the letters freehand on paper in black acrylic paint, cut them out, and photographed them in the landscape. Then she then brought the letters back to her studio glued them on paper, and used them as the basis for a series of drawings. Here color, shape and line have the simplicity of illustrations from children's books.