

Goldstein, Caroline, "See Sculptures by Kehinde Wiley, Alison Saar, and More Commissioned for Destination Crenshaw, L.A.'s $100 Million Black Arts Initiative," artnet, 26 October 2021.

artnetnews

See Sculptures by Kehinde Wiley, Alison Saar, and More Commissioned for Destination Crenshaw, L.A.'s $100 Million Black Arts Initiative

100 sculptures will ultimately line a 1.3-mile corridor in South Los Angeles.

Caroline Goldstein, October 26, 2021

View of Sankofa Park with work by Maren Hassinger. Courtesy of Destination Crenshaw.

The project has some major funding firepower behind it. The Getty Foundation recently committed $3 million in grants for commissions, and professional basketball player DeMar DeRozan of the Chicago Bulls is leading a fundraising effort that includes naming opportunities in Sankofa Park.

"Destination Crenshaw will be a fitting and joyful tribute to Black creativity and history," Getty Foundation director Joan Weinstein said in a statement. "We are proud to join with other funders, public and private, in supporting this ambitious cultural place-keeping initiative, which though unique in location and scope can serve as a model for other communities throughout the country."